Dear Friends,

Happy Fall!

I am excited to share with you that the Career Transitions Center is developing a new strategic plan and has added a new staff member.

Over the last six months, the Career Transitions Center (CTC) staff and board have been developing a new two-year strategic plan. We anticipate operating in a hybrid world. With that in mind, we are committed to reaching professionals in need of the professional and emotional support needed to find work aligned with their skills and values.

- We help to empower mid-to-late career professionals seeking meaningful employment.
- We leverage 25 years of experience serving individuals in the Chicagoland community by specializing in personalized, effective, and affordable coaching.
- Our approach is holistic with a focus on the emotional, mental, physical, social, spiritual, and environmental impact of career transition and job loss.

The average client is 47 years old, unemployed and struggling to manage work, family and mental health. Their job search concerns include finding meaningful work; ageism; and finding a work culture aligned with their values and needs.

Welcome Scot!

In September, CTC hired Scot Mazur as our first Partnerships Director. He will focus on promoting the mission and expanding the reach and impact of the organization while driving the acquisition of new clients. Scot is an award-winning enterprising business-to-business professional with a track record of cultivating new business across sales cycles. In his volunteer work, Scot has served as a career coach for the Ascension Church's Living Your Strengths Ministry, and Co-Facilitator of the Loop Chapter of the Executive Network Group of Greater Chicago. Scot resides with his family in Oak Park.

I am pleased to share this quote from a client who recently secured employment. In my next email we will learn more about Will and his story.

Congratulations!
